

High level language and low level language

High-level languages are human-friendly, portable, and easier to write, but less efficient. Low-level languages are machine-oriented, efficient, but harder to understand and less portable.